Disclaimer

Welcome to the Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo website. The materials on this site have been prepared for general informational purposes only in order to provide the Internet subscriber and online reader with an understanding of the services provided by our firm and the experience of our attorneys. The materials presented do not constitute legal advice, and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the firm, or any of its attorneys, or clients; and are not guaranteed to be correct, complete, or current.

Any publications viewed on our site are intended to provide general information only and are not intended as a source of legal advice. As the law is always in a state of change and differs from state to state, Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo does not guarantee the accuracy of the information under these publications. You should not assume that any information included applies to your specific situation. Accordingly, you should not use this information as a substitute for legal advice from a licensed attorney in your state. The firm is not responsible for inadvertent errors that may occur in the publishing process.

Your use of this site and its e-mail accessibility does not create an attorney–client relationship. While Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo welcomes the opportunity to be retained as counsel, this site is not intended to be advertising. We accept clients and render legal services only after mutual consent has been obtained and certain internal procedures completed. Our firm is not willing to accept the representation of clients from those states where the marketing materials do not comply with State Bar requirements and where the client is generated solely from that communication.

If you communicate with us by e-mail in connection with an ongoing matter for which we already represent you or you desire to establish a legal representation relationship with our firm, please remember that Internet e-mail is not secure, any transmission could be intercepted and may not be treated as privileged or confidential. You should avoid sending sensitive or confidential information by Internet e-mail messages unless they are adequately protected from interception, tampering or misdirection. All such communications may lose the benefit of the attorney–client privilege.

Links to other websites are provided as a courtesy to visitors. The firm is not affiliated or associated with and does not sponsor or endorse the information contained under such sites or the accuracy or currency of any information contained under these other sites.

While we hope the materials available through our site will be helpful as background information, Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo disclaims any express or implied warranties, including any warranty of merchantability or fitness of any materials set forth on this website.
Disclaimer